A urinary tract infection (pyelonephritis) is a much more severe infection that affects the tissue producing urine in the kidneys. Hospitals often take away any drugs the patient may have brought with them, even aspirin, upon admission.